

ABSTRACT

A putter for improving a golfer's putting game having a shaft attached to a head having a hitting surface, top surface, and a bottom surface. The head having a front portion and a rearwardly extending portion. The rearwardly extending portion having a pair of side walls. An aperture being defined on the bottom surface of the head. A ball disposed within the head and protruding through both the apertures of said top surface and bottom surface. The ball being both removeable and mounted to roll only in the direction perpendicular to the hitting surface.